minus the pressure.

Anecdotal evidence tells us that entertaining at home is no longer as common as it was in its late last century heyday. Whether programs such as MasterChef have made us feel shy about our 'plating', or My Kitchen Rules has reminded us of the pitfalls, or we're just too time-poor and stressed, gathering with friends around a shared table in the comfort of our own home has become a rarity.

Online platform, Intertain, brings back the pleasure of home entertaining by delivering your choice of one of Australia's top chefs to your door, ready to create a memorable, bespoke dining experience.

Clients choose the cuisine and the chef and plan the menu together. "All the chefs offering their services on our platform are fully vetted, have a minimum of five years' working experience, and hold appropriate culinary and food-handling certificates," said Intertain CEO and Co-Founder, James Loganathan.

"Our chefs have created a menu at almost any price point. From grazing platters to curated degustations, canapés to cassoulets, sushi to sizzling wagyu, Intertain brings a world of fine dining to the intimacy of your own home, so that hosts can enjoy the company of their guests, instead of a clean-up in the kitchen."

The platform also provides chefs with a flexible way to work for themselves away from the chaos and long hours of commercial kitchens.

"To date, we have served over 4,000 guests and plated more than 12,200 courses," said Loganathan. "With the holiday entertaining season just around the corner, we expect to be busier than ever.

"Dining out can be great fun, but nothing beats the not worrying about finding a ride, booking a babysitter and being able to drink your own wine (or the chef's suggested wines).

"Being able to enjoy fabulous food with family and friends without the fuss of is Intertain's recipe for a fantastic event," he said.
